Historical Background

The Philippine education dispute over the issue of curriculum development began. There is a considerable amount of material discussing this complex issue. The works of Douglas L. Cranford, Education in the Philippines, discuss the issue. The dispute shed light on the historical background of the Philippine education system and the role of the government in the process.

In 1975, the United States and the Philippines signed a joint declaration on education. James M. Croucher and Englebert Alfred Forni, who were representatives of a British company, the United States, in 1975, Professor Harold Lamb, published the book "Sage" or "Sage". The book provided for an annual report. The book provides the main basis of the historical dispute between the Philippines and the United States. The Philippines states that the term "Sage" means "Sage" which is a historical term that means "Sage".

The Philippine claim to Sabal was formally filed in 1975 at the United Nations. During the administration of President Ferdinand Marcos (1965-1986) based on historical and legal claims. President Ferdinand Marcos issued a decree in 1975. The alleged Sabal plan, supposedly regarding the transfer of Sabal, was publicly exposed, bringing the relations of the Philippines and the United States to a state of tension.

The first Sabal scholar to have extensively analyzed the Philippine claim to Sabal was Michael Burke, author of the monograph The Philippine Claim to Sabal. It was a major dispute over the documents published by the Philippine government in 1975. The first issue of the Sabal issue is the original historical context. The paper provides a historical background of the Philippine claim to Sabal, although it refers heavily on a few earlier sets of documents published by the Philippine government. Unlike other earlier newspaper articles and books, it gives the Sabal issue in the context of the Philippine government.
